At the Amherst (Mass.) Agricultural College they have a set of live professors, who are ever on the alert in trying experiments, by which they show that it is not the salary alone they receive which is the sole motive of action prompting them in the discharge of their duties. Prof. Goessman, one of these, has recently shown some remarkable results both in the quality of the fruit and the period of development, by girding the grapevine. The vines were girdled about the first week of August, when the same and the time that the discharges are the street first had its origin in the same manner.

We note the earthquake and the devastating hurricane; but these changes are so gradual man seldom observes them until the channel has become overhanging cliffs, or a mountain has disappeared before the icy stream, or the ocean has given us a Florida. Thus it is in disease. Our attention is attracted by acute diseases, as fevers, cholers, etc., while chronic diseases (often the most dangerous in result), being slow in their development, are seldom noticed until they have made an almost ineffaceable impression upon the system. Persons believing themselves comparatively healthful are oftimes the victums of these diseases, and only become aware of their presence when relief is almost impossible. Diseases of the liver and stomach are the commonest of these chronic affections. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Piensant Purgative Pelleta are never-falling remedies for these diseases. They produce a healthful secretion of the bile, prevent indigestion by regulating the bowels, and impart a vigorous tone to the whole system.
